Let the Valleys Be Raised

Sometimes old pieces of music can be given new life by clothing them in a new musical arrangement. This piece was first published in 1977 in the St. Louis Jesuit collection of songs for Advent and Christmas titled Gentle Night. In that presentation this song was accompanied by guitar and given a decidedly country flavor. In this new incarnation, it is accompanied primarily by percussion based on an African Bomba rhythm. The rhythmic patterns for the primary percussion instruments—congas, hand drum, shakers, and gourd—are included in the instrument parts. It would be possible, of course, to substitute whatever percussion instruments you have available.

A principle of good orchestration is to use the various instruments to highlight the form of the piece. In other words, all the instruments should not play during the entire piece. This would become monotonous very quickly. If you listen to the recording, you can hear the conga and hand drum drop out during the verse, leaving only the gourd and shaker to carry the rhythm. But then notice how the conga and hand drum return at the end of each verse as the music makes its crescendo into the refrain. You will also hear how the tambourine, previously silent, enters on the final refrains. Its magical entry was saved till later so its sound can help the song build even more at the end.

You will find parts for percussion, two oboes and bells in the Instrument Packet (OCP 70428).
